

ABSTRACT

A buffer virtualization mechanism to allow for a large number of allocatable buffering resources. In particular, embodiments of the invention involve a tracking technique for implementing the use of virtual buffers within a microprocessor architecture.